MIAMI DESIGN DISTRICT

A LOOK TO THE FUTURE

The latest expansion of the $1.4 billion Miami Design District is almost complete. Take a stroll through the new pedestrian walkways, experience art installations, magnificent plazas & enjoy all the retail ranging from ultra-luxury to urban-hip. But it doesn't stop there. More attractions are on the way!

Due to arrive over the next six months are four new restaurants by culinary stars Brad Kilgore, Joël Robuchon and Jean-Georges Vongerichten. So is a large food hall, St. Roch Market featuring 12 eateries. Also slated to join the growing list of retailers; Dolce & Gabbana, Balenciaga and Céline. Visitors also have two new hotels to look forward to due to be completed in 2020.

Giving the Design District's locale a distinct advantage over traditional malls.

An analysis published by Fung Global Retail & Technology cited leisure shopping — stores surrounded by restaurants, entertainment venues and service businesses — as one of the biggest potential growth areas for the retail industry.

More than a dozen retailers within the Design District reported a year-over-year increase of 50-100 percent in sales in January 2018. The number of vehicles parked inside the City View garage (which is intentionally priced low, at $3 for four hours, to encourage visitors) has gone up 50 percent every month since June 2017, while the Institute of Contemporary Art, Miami has drawn in over 30,000 visitors since opening its doors in December.

MIAMI
